JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinions of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi are not yet reported. The text of said opinions is contained in Appendix A hereto.

JURISDICTION

(1) These proceedings seek declaratory judgments that Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code, as amended, comes within the purview of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. Section 1973) and 42 U.S.C. Section 1971; permanent injunctions against the application and enforcement of said Section 6271-08 by certain county Boards of Education; and permanent injunctions against the appointment of the Superintendent of Education by said county Boards of Education until such time as the Voting Rights Act of 1965 has been complied with, or the procedure followed for opting to make said post appointive as set forth in Section 6271-08 prior to its amendment in 1966.

Jurisdiction was conferred on the court below by 28 U.S.C. Sections 1343(3) and (4), and 2201 and 2202, and by 42 U.S.C. Sections 1971(d) and 1973(j) and (f). A district court of three-judges was required to be convened by 28 U.S.C. Section 2281 and 42 U.S.C. Section 1973c.

(2) The judgment herein sought to be reviewed was entered in each of the consolidated cases on October 5, 1967, and the Notice of Appeal in each case was filed on November 28, 1967, with the United States District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi.

(3) The Supreme Court has jurisdiction of this direct appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. Section 1253 and 42 U.S.C. Section 1973c.

(4) There are no cases specifically dealing with appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. Section 1253 or 42 U.S.C. Section 1973c from a three judge court decision pursuant to the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. Section 1973). This appeal fits so closely within the terms of the cited statutes, however, as to need no precedents to sustain jurisdiction. The last sentence of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (hereinafter "Section 5") provides that "any action under this section shall be heard and determined by a court of three judges . . . and any appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court."

(5) Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code of 1942, prior to its amendment in 1966, may be found in volume 5 of the 1964 Cumulative Supplement to the Mississippi Code, at pages 392-93. The 1966 amendment to Section 6271-08 may be found in Volume 5 of the 1966 Cumulative Supplement to the Mississippi Code at pages 436-438.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

- (1) Whether the District Court erred:
- (a) In finding that Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code, as amended by the 1966 session of the Mississippi Legislature does not come within the purview of and is not covered by Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. Section 1973c) so as to require compliance with said Section 5 by the State of Mississippi and the counties involved in each of the cases herein on appeal, prior to enforcing or applying Section 6271-08 as amended; and
- (b) In dismissing each of the complaints, thereby denying the relief requested therein.

(2) Whether the November 7, 1967, election in each of the counties herein involved having been held in accordance with Section 6271-08, as amended (i.e., no election for County Superintendent having been held), this Court, if it finds that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 should have been complied with as aforesaid, should order an election of such County Superintendent of Education pursuant to the provisions of Section 6271-08 prior to its amendment in 1966.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

These cases deal solely with the applicability of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 to Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code. Prior to June 17, 1966, every county in Mississippi except one elected its Superintendent of Education unless it held a special election pursuant to Section 6271-08 to make such post appointive. Jefferson, Claiborne and Holmes Counties, the counties herein, have always elected their Superintendent of Education.

Effective June 17, 1966, the Legislature of Mississippi amended the aforesaid Section 6271-08 to provide that in twelve described counties, including Jefferson, Claiborne and Holmes Counties, the Superintendent of Education must be appointed rather than elected.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. Section 1973) applies to Mississippi and provides in Section 5 that whenever a State or political subdivision thereof:

"shall enact or seek to administer any voting qualification or prerequisite to voting, or standard, practice or procedure with respect to voting different from that in force or effect on November 1, 1964," (42 U.S.C. Section 1973c)

such State or political subdivision cannot enforce or apply such change until it has either (1) instituted an action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for a declaratory judgment that

"such qualification, prerequisite, standard, practice or procedure does not have the purpose and will not have the effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race or color" (42 U.S.C. Section 1973c) and such judgment has been entered, or (2) submitted the change to the Attorney General of the United States and had no objection interposed by the Attorney General within 60 days after such submission.

Neither the State of Mississippi, nor any of its officials, nor Jefferson, Claiborne or Holmes Counties, nor any of their officials has instituted any action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia with respect to Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code, as amended, nor submitted such amended Section to the Attorney General of the United States.

Plaintiffs in each of the three suits herein seek to have the amendment to Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code declared such a change in qualification, prerequisite, standard, practice or procedure, within the purview of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as to require defendants to comply with Section 5. The District Court in each of the cases held that the amendment did not come within the purview of and is not covered by the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and dismissed

SUBSTANTIALITY OF QUESTIONS

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. Section 1973) was designed to prevent states and political subdivisions with a history of avoiding the mandate of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States from so doing, and to prevent such practices prior to their becoming effective.

The constitutionality of Section 5 has been upheld in South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 335 (1966):

"Congress knew that some of the States covered by Section 4(b) of the Act had resorted to the extraordinary stratagem of contriving new rules of various kinds for the sole purpose of perpetuating voting discrimination in the face of adverse federal court decrees (footnote omitted). Congress had reason to suppose that these States might try similar maneuvers in the future in order to evade the remedies for voting discrimination contained in the Act itself. Under the compulsion of these unique circumstances, Congress responded in a permissibly decisive manner (by enacting Section 5)."

Section 5 is triggered when, by its own provisions, there is any change in "any voting qualification or prerequisite to voting, or standard, practice or procedure with respect to voting different from that in force or effect on November 1, 1964 . . . ." It is a fundamental precept of statutory construction that the words of a statute are to be given their ordinary meaning. The quoted words could hardly be broader in scope. This breadth of meaning is reinforced by the definition of "voting" provided by Section 14(c)(1) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. Section 1973 1(c)(1)) as including "all action necessary to make a vote effective in any primary, special or general election . . . ." (Emphasis added.) A broad, rather than a narrow interpretation, is given further support by the fact that Section 5 is meant to prevent not only denial by a state of the right to vote, but also abridgment of the right to vote.

The legislative history of Section 5 similarly shows that Section 5 was intended to cover a wide range of state provisions. The Attorney-General of the United States testified that "two or three" types of state law could be written out of the section, but "there are precious few, because there are an awful lot of things that could be started for the purposes of evading the Fifteenth Amendment if there is a desire to do so." (Mr. Katzenbach, House Hearings, p. 95) Earlier in the hearing he gave examples of changes which would not be covered--changes in voting age, residence requirements, and balloting procedures such as changing from paper ballots to machines (he expressed some reservations if the change was from machines to paper). (Mr. Katzenbach, House Hearings, pp. 61-62) In the Senate hearings, the Attorney-General accepted a change by Senator Fong to include in the section the language "standards" and "practices". (Senate Hearings, p. 192) The Senator thought the change would broaden the section to make it all-inclusive. The Attorney-General thought the section all-inclusive even without the change. (Senate Hearings, pp. 191-92)

The overall purpose of the Voting Rights Act and the specific purpose of Section 5 was to eliminate and prohibit practices and procedures which would perpetuate the effects of discrimination in the election process. In Section 5 Congress sought to prevent state legislatures from raising new barriers of discrimination. Past experience had defined the need for such a remedy.

"Mr. Katzenbach: The justification is simply this: Our experience in the areas that would be covered by this Bill has been such as to indicate frequently on the part of state legislatures a desire in a sense to outguess the Congress of the United States. I refer, for example to the new voter qualifications that have been put into statutes of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama following the enactment of the 1964 Act which made things more difficult for people to vote . . . .

"The same thing was true, as the Chairman may recall, in Louisiana at the time of the initial school desegregation, where the legislature passed I don't know how many laws in the shortest period of time. Every time the judge issued a decree, the legislature. . . passed a law to frustrate the decree." (House Hearings, 60.)

In the time it would take for the Government to learn about such newly adopted procedures (Mr. Marshall, House Hearings, p. 72) and litigate their validity, the new statutes would have done their damage (Mr. Katzenbach, Senate Hearings, p. 237). Thus the remedy of Section 5 was, basically, to require federal scrutiny of such statutes in the area of voting before they could be put into effect.

To those familiar with the past history of discriminatory voting legislation in Mississippi, the need for such protection as Section 5 provides is readily apparent. (See, e.g., United States v. Mississippi, 380 U.S. 128, 135-136 (1965)):

"It is apparent that the complaint . . . charged a long standing, carefully prepared, and faithfully observed plan to bar Negroes from voting in the State of Mississippi, a plan which the registration statistics . . . would seem to show had been remarkably successful."

Congress and the courts have consistently noted the pattern of discrimination in Mississippi and the purpose behind its voting legislation. The Supreme Court in commenting on the Voting Rights Act of 1965 in South Carolina v. Katzenbach, supra, said:

"The Voting Rights Act was designed by Congress to banish the blight of racial discrimination in voting, which has infected the electoral process in parts of our country for nearly a century." Id. at 308.

and again,

"Congress felt itself confronted by an insidious and pervasive evil which had been perpetuated in certain parts of our country through unremitting and ingenious defiance of the Constitution." Id. at 309.

"(S)ome of the States affected have merely switched to discriminatory devices not covered by the federal decrees or have enacted difficult new tests designed to prolong the existing disparity between white and Negro registration (specifically referring in n. 19 at this point to the Mississippi Legislature)." Id. at 314.

Having proved the overwhelming history of past problems of discrimination and legislative purpose, it is hornbook law that a presumption arises that facts or conditions once proven are deemed to continue to exist unless proven otherwise. Allstate Finance Corp. v. Zimmerman, 330 F.2d 740 (5th Cir. 1964); NLRB v. Piqua Munising Wood Prods. Co., 109 F.2d 552 (6th Cir. 1940); 2 Wigmore, Evidence, Section 437 (3d ed. 1940).

This doctrine has been specifically adopted in discrimination cases as in Cassell v. Texas, 339 U.S. 282, 293 (1950), where Mr. Justice Reed stated:

"If one factor is uniform in a continuing series of events that are brought to pass through human intervention, the law would have to have the blindness of indifference rather than the blindness of impartiality not to attribute the uniform factor to man's purpose."

Thus, in Sellers v. Trussell, 253 F. Supp. 915 (M.D. Ala. 1966), the only case to consider Section 5 to date, in concluding that an Alabama election statute had a purpose of racial discrimination, Judge Johnson gave practical effect to the foregoing presumption when he discussed the history of voting discrimination against Negroes in Alabama and reasoned that:

"Any determination in this case of legislative motive must be viewed in this light. Viewing Act 536 in such light, leads me . . . to the firm conclusion that its introduction and passage was racially motivated." 253 F. Supp. at 919.

Taking away from the qualified electors of certain counties in the state their right to vote for what has always been an elective office is a change in standard, practice or procedure with respect to voting, and is well within the purview of Section 5. This is not merely an "abridgment" of the right to vote as was found in Sellers v. Trussell, supra, to be within the contemplation of Section 5, but is an absolute denial of the right to vote with respect to the County Superintendent of Education.

In Sellers Judge Rives concluded that a statute extending the terms of county commissioners in Bullock County, Alabama, from 4 to 6 years was covered by Section 5 and, because Alabama had failed to comply with the requirements of Section 5, was in violation thereof. (Judge Johnson found it unnecessary to reach that question, and Judge Grooms dissented.) Suspension of the right to vote for two years is much less of a change than the abolition of one's right to vote for a particular office indefinitely. If the amendment in question herein is not held to be within the language of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, then the Act will be a dead-letter law in that it will provide no remedy against discrimination and abuse of the elective processes except in the most simple and obvious case.

It takes no great imagination to conceive of the potential for racial discrimination which underlies the amendment to Section 6271-08 of the Mississippi Code, making the formerly elective post of County Superintendent of Education mandatorily appointive in 12 of Mississippi's 82 counties.

After the invalidation of the poll tax requirements to voting, and after federal registrars were sent to Mississippi, large numbers of previously unregistered Negroes were able to register to vote. A number of counties in the state now have, or are close to having Negro voting majorities. The County Superintendent of Education is elected on a county-wide basis.

Of the 12 counties elusively described in the amendment herein in question, and which are henceforth required to appoint a Superintendent of Education, ten of the twelve have, or could have, Negro voting majorities. See Appendix C for a breakdown of the counties and population according to the 1960 Federal Decennial Census.

What conceivable legitimate purpose was served in 1966 by singling out twelve counties and legislating away their option to elect or appoint a County Superintendent of Education -- forcing them to appoint rather than elect as they had in the past? This is particularly significant in view of the importance of the office of County Superintendent of Education; as, for example, in integrating and upgrading schools.

It is no answer to say to the Negroes of the county whose Superintendent of Education must now be appointed that he is to be appointed by an elective County Board of Education. The Board of Education in each of these counties is elected by districts, and it does not follow that a county having a county-wide Negro voting majority has a Negro voting majority in each of its districts, or even in a majority of its districts.

It is to be kept in mind that the appellants are not asking that the amendment itself be declared unconstitutional. They are merely asking that the state or counties involved comply with the Voting Rights Act of 1965, under which either the Attorney-General of the United States or the District Court for the District of Columbia may make a determination as to the discriminatory purpose and effect of the amendment prior to its becoming effective. The amendment in question is exactly the kind of change which the Voting Rights Act contemplated should be reviewed in order to prevent devious dilution and withdrawal of the right to vote on account of race or color.

It is no accident that Section 5 places the burden of proof of nondiscriminatory purpose and effect upon the covered State. From the foregoing discussion, one can reasonably conclude that Section 6271-08 might well in fact be used to discriminate against the Negro, for racial discrimination in a State such as Mississippi has been so pervasive and has so infected the processes of Government, especially in the area of voting rights. See, e.g., United States v. Mississippi, 359 F.2d 103 (5th Cir. 1966); United States v. Ramsey, 353 F.2d 650 (5th Cir. 1965); United States v. Lynd, 349 F.2d 785 (5th Cir. 1965); United States v. Ward, 345 F.2d 857 (5th Cir. 1965). Therefore, it is fitting that the State of Mississippi assume the burden of demonstrating that Section 6271-08 "does not have the purpose and will not have the effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race or color."

The scope of the language "voting qualification, or prerequisite to voting, or standard, practice or procedure with respect to voting" has never been construed by an appeal court. An authoritative construction of the above language is essential to the viability of the Voting Rights Act and protection of the right to vote and the strength of the vote.

Respectfully submitted,

January 24, 1968.

APPENDIX B

Section 6271-08, as herein relevant,
before amendment read:

"(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) hereof, the office of county superintendent of education may be made appointive in any county in the manner herein provided. Upon the filing of a petition signed by not less than twenty per cent (20%) of the qualified electors of such county, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of such county, within sixty (60) days after the filing of such petition, to call a special election at which there shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such county the question of whether the office of county superintendent of education of said county shall continue to be elective or shall be filled by appointment by the county board of education of said county. The order calling such special election shall designate the date upon which same shall be held and a notice of such election, signed by the clerk of the board of supervisors, shall be published once a week for at least three (3) consecutive weeks in at least one newspaper published in such county. The first publication of such notice shall be made not less than twenty-one (21) days prior to the date fixed for such election and the last publication shall be made not more than seven (7) days prior to such date. If no newspaper is published in such county then such notice shall be given by publication of same for the required time in some newspaper having a general circulation in such county and, in addition, by posting a copy of such notice for at least twenty-one (21) days next preceding such election at three (3) public places in such county, one of which shall be at the door of the county courthouse in each judicial district. Said election shall be held, as far as is practicable, in the same manner as other elections are held in such county and all qualified electors of the county may vote therein. If a majority of such qualified electors who vote in such election shall vote in favor of the appointment of the county superintendent of education by the county board of education then, at the expiration of the term of the county superintendent of education then in office, the county superintendent of education of said county shall not be elected but shall thereafter be appointed by the county board of education for a term of not more than four (4) years; otherwise, said office shall remain elective. No special election shall be held in any county under the provisions of this subsection more often than once in every four (4) years, and no change from the elective to the appointive method of the selection of the county superintendent of education shall become effective except at the expiration of the term of the county superintendent of education in office at the time such election is held.

"In any county of the first class lying wholly within a levee district and within which there is situated a city of more than forty thousand (40,000) population according to the last decennial federal census the county superintendent of education shall hereafter be appointed by the county board of education as above provided."

Following its amendment in 1966, Section 6271-08, as herein relevant, reads:

"(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) hereof, the office of county superintendent of education may be made appointive in any county in the manner herein provided. Upon the filing of a petition signed by not less than twenty per cent (20%) of the qualified electors of such county, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of such county, within sixty (60) days after the filing of such petition, to call a special election at which there shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such county the question of whether the office of county superintendent of education of said county shall continue to be elective or shall be filled by appointment by the county board of education of said county. Provided, however, that where a Class Three county having an area in excess of eight hundred twenty-five (825) square miles has a county unit school system comprising less than an entire county, the petition shall only be signed by electors residing within the county unit school district and only electors of said district shall vote on the proposition of appointing the county superintendent of education. The order calling such special election shall designate the date upon which same shall be held and a notice of such election, signed by the clerk of the board of supervisors, shall be published once a week for at least three (3) consecutive weeks in at least one (1) newspaper published in such county. The first publication of such notice shall be made not less than twenty-one (21) days prior to the date fixed for such election and the last publication shall be made not more than seven (7) days prior to such date. If no newspaper is published in such county then such notice shall be given by publication of same for the required time in some newspaper having a general circulation in such county and, in addition, by posting a copy of such notice for at least twenty-one (21) days next preceding such election at three (3) public places in such county, one (1) of which shall be at the door of the county courthouse in each judicial district. Said election shall be held, as far as is practicable, in the same manner as other elections are held in such county and all qualified electors of the county may vote therein. If a majority of such qualified electors who vote in such election shall vote in favor of the appointment of the county superintendent of education then, at the expiration of the term of the county superintendent of education then in office, the county superintendent of education of said county shall not be elected but shall thereafter be appointed by the county board of education for a term of not more than four (4) years; otherwise, said office shall remain elective. No special election shall be held in any county under the provisions of this subsection more often than once in every four (4) years, and no change from the elective to the appointive method of the selection of the county superintendent of education shall become effective except at the expiration of the term of the county superintendent of education in office at the time such election is held.

"In any county of the first class lying wholly within a levee district and within which there is situated a city of more than forty thousand (40,000) population according to the last decennial Federal census the county superintendent of education shall hereafter be appointed by the county board of education as above provided.
